OSHA's Crystalline Silica Rule

Construction industry must comply by June 23, 2017

OSHA has issued two standards to protect workers from exposure to respirable crystalline silica, one for construction and the other for general industry and maritime. These standards allow employers to tailor compliance solutions to the specific conditions in their workplaces.

The standards reduce the permissible exposure limit (PEL) to 50 micrograms per cubic meter of air, averaged over an 8-hour shift.

The standards also require employers to:

- Use engineering controls (such as water or ventilation) to limit worker exposure to the PEL
- Provide respirators and other PPE when engineering controls cannot adequately limit exposure
- Limit worker access to high exposure areas
- Develop a written exposure control plan and designate a competent person to implement the plan
- Restrict housekeeping practices that expose workers to silica where feasible alternatives are available
- Offer medical exams to highly exposed workers
- Train workers on silica risks and how to limit exposures
- Keep records of workers' silica exposure and medical exams

Similar standards for General Industry, Maritime and Hydraulic Fracturing must be met by June 23, 2018.

Control Methods to Protect Against Silica Exposure

- LEV (Local Exhaust Ventilation) systems: Capture dust at surface of workpiece during drilling, grinding, surface preparation and cutting
- Tools equipped with shroud and dust collection system (vacuum):
  - Dust collector must provide the air flow recommended by the tool manufacturer or greater, have a filter with 99% or greater efficiency and a filter-cleaning mechanism.
  - HEPA Filter necessary for best protection.
- Water spraying systems: Pressurized water pumps for tools designed for wet drilling and cutting such as core drills and concrete saws
- Operate and maintain tools according to manufacturer instructions
- Always use appropriate PPE: Respirators & safety glasses

For More Information

Details of the OSHA Crystalline Silica Rule can be found on the Occupational Health and Safety Administration website at www.osha.gov/silica.

American Producers also has information from tool manufacturers regarding their dust control solutions. Many of these products are shown in this catalog. Your sales representative can help you select the tools and accessories that will assist you in complying with the new standards.

Tips for Prolonging Cylinder and Pump Life

- Use the dust caps provided with the fittings
- Before connecting any fittings, use a clean, lint-free cloth to wipe dirt and debris from all fittings
- Establish a regular maintenance schedule for changing hydraulic pump oil around every 20 hours of use with genuine Enerpac hydraulic pump oil. Our in-house Enerpac specialist can provide this service from the mobile van. There will be a fee for this service.

By following these procedures, cylinder walls are less likely to become scored. Cylinders with scored walls can cause oil leakage which can result in failure of the cylinder and possible injury. Cylinders with scored walls are NOT repairable.
